MEMORANDUM FOR: Director of Finance

Bob:

Attached are some statistics drawn from an IBM listing as of May 1966 showing the number of members of your Career Service, by grade, who hold college degrees and those who do not. Mr. Bannerman would like to discuss this with you at the time he goes over your Executive Inventory.

It's recognized that many individuals in the lower grades are clerical or technical rather than professional, but the machine couldn't sort them out. Similarly, the listing couldn't distinguish those who may have attended college for a period of time but not long enough for a degree. If you have any questions on any of the data, I'll be glad to try to answer them.

Mr. Bannerman:

I agree with [redacted] but I think

25X1

we must face the reality that we cannot bring graduate accountants in and expect them to do FPA or payroll work. The alternatives are:

- a. To send our payroll-type clerks to school for advancement.
- b. To hire clerks for clerical/finance jobs, and college-trained accountants for professional jobs.

Same applies to Logistics.
